LAST FORUM MEETING IS EXCELLENT

Women With Messages Give Interesting Viewpoints of Topics

TEACHING DISCUSSED

Mrs. Toll, Mrs. Campbell and Mrs. Rall Give Talks

By GERTRUDE GIBBS

The last forum meeting of the Tuesday Afternoon club was held this week, the club having voted for but two meetings a month the coming year. As the president took occasion to state, it was, from several viewpoints, the best one of the series, and that was, doubtless, because the speakers were all women with a message, and all trained to appreciate the value of time, and therefore disposed to economize it by giving what they had to present as directly, forcefully and concisely as possible.

Mrs. Charles H. Toll, a resident of this city and president of the Los Angeles Ebell club, was first introduced, her theme being "Women in Pedagogy." Her talk was a clear survey of the subject, which filled her fellow members and friends in the audience with admiration for her keen analysis. She showed how women have been turning away from teaching, and the reasons why being the more lucrative employments offered during the war, the unfavorable conditions and lack of opportunity for advancement. So great is the shortage because of this reversal of the former movement toward teaching as a profession, that speakers before women's clubs are now appealing to mothers to encourage their daughters to take up kindergarten work or special departmental work, she said. She quoted statistics showing that 18,000 school buildings are closed and a million children deprived of educational opportunities because of the shortage of some 90,000 teachers. The investigations undertaken by the Russell Sage Foundation and the Carnegie Foundation to ascertain the cause of this change, were referred to as evidence of the serious attention being given to the matter. Reports of the National Educational association, which undertook to get to the bottom of the trouble, showed, she said, that only 25 per cent of the teachers the country over have had an education two years beyond high school, and 4,000,000 children out of the 20,000,000 in school are taught by teachers under 21 years of age who have had little or no high school training and no professional training. The compensation has been found to be as low or even worse than in some of the most poorly paid industries, the average of all salaries being $634.30 per year. This, she thought, might account for the fact that some teachers who had fallen into the hands of loan sharks and found themselves unable to pay the exorbitant rates of interest charged them, had been forced to go through bankruptcy. These things, she declared, are responsible for the profession of teaching being called a "sweated occupation." It is the cause, she said, of teachers' uions, which bespeak initiative and group consciousness.

JINGLING JAZZ OF THE NEWS
By Bert Marple

Fifteen hundred people crowd into the pageant cage like sardines,
Over at the Intermediate last night;
While the foothill folks are planning to improve their pretty section,
They intend to do each little thing up right.

R. T. W. class holds meetings and they plan for weiner party,
Glendale Rotaries are in L. A. today;
Legion soon will drive for members, then they'll have a closing program,
They will sign up every prospect, so they say.

Frederick Warde will pay a visit to Tujunga people shortly,
While Miss Blossom will be sung by Music club;
Y. M. planners hold a meeting at the Finlay home for business,
While Bob Elliott cries "Hello, dad," by gub.

Mrs. Witherall is honored by the guild, she gets some posies,
Mesdames Toll, Campbell and Rall each give address;
Tuesday club holds final program—lots of business, is transacted;
Leading merchants advertise within The Press.

Forgt the Stings and Sorrows; Charge Off Disappointments

"Let us begin the day with a clean page, wipe out the disappointments, charge off the disappointments, forget the stings and little sorrows and frets, and when someone comes with a painful and unhappy recollection, say, 'I closed the books last night. It was charged off.'"

This is the philosophy of James W. Foley, as it appears this evening in "The Listening Post." It is good, wholesome philosophy, and each evening Mr. Foley sets forth in that particularly bright spot in this newspaper something worth while.

Again we call attention to this very wonderful work of Mr. Foley in "The Listening Post" each evening. It is so far above the average, so readable, so impelling, that we wish all our readers would take the time to read and get the inspiration from this particular bit of philosophy he sets forth tonight.

All the other features on the editorial page have their special interest, too, and we want the readers of this newspaper to enjoy them.

FOOTHILL FOLKS APPROVE BRIDGE PROJECT

Ask Extension of Patterson Ave. ,and Protection for School Zone

The extension of Patterson avenue to San Fernando road, the building of a bridge over Los Angeles river into Griffith Park, the asking of Los Angeles sight-seeing bus companies to continue their route through Glendale and Eagle Rock, the placing of a wigwag signal at the Pacific Electric crossing on North Central avenue, were discussed last night at a meeting of the Foothill Improvement Association, held at the Central avenue school. Mrs. Myrtle Buckman acted as secretary of the meeting.

It is the belief of the association that the extension of Patterson avenue to San Fernando road would benefit the city of Glendale by diverting the lighter traffic and sightseeing parties through the main part of the city. The association highly endorsed the building of a bridge over the Los Angeles river into Griffith Park at the extension of Broadway.

It was suggested that the Chamber of Commerce and the City of Glendale ask the sightseeing bus companies of Los Angeles, which are running sight-seeing parties to Pasadena, to continue their route through Eagle Rock and Glendale over Kenneth road, down Grand View and back through the business section of Glendale, over Glendale avenue to Los Angeles, thus advertising the foothill district and business section of Glendale.

After the serious accident at Central avenue and the Pacific Electric crossing of the Burbank line, which occurred on June 6 at 1:30, the Foothill Improvement Association decided to write the city council in protest and petition for a wigwag signal at that point, and to inform the school board of the dangerous corner, which is within the school zone.

The new Grand View school is fast nearing completion and will be ready for the fall term, with full six grades. This and the new firehouse just completed are added attractions to this fast-growing section of Glendale.

Mrs. Myrtle Buckman is acting secretary of the organization.

CATALINA CALLS TO LEGION MEMBERS

A number of the American Legion members in Glendale are expecting to take in the Legion excursion to Catalina, which will be held June 17 and 18. This affair will be held under the auspices of the inter-post council in Los Angeles, and all the Legion members in Southern California are invited to attend.

The following program of entertainment has been prepared:

Saturday night there will be a dance and entertainment in the pavilion at Avalon. The opening event for Sunday will be a baseball game at 10 o'clock in the morning. The activities of the afternoon will start with a baseball game at 1:30 between two county league teams. In addition to this there will be all kinds of side trips, smaller attractions and the like. At 4 o'clock the boat will leave for San Pedro and the party will arrive in Los Angeles at 7:15 o'clock.

A special price of $5 for the round trip with a night's lodging at Avalon has been secured and it is expected that several hundred members of the Legion will make the trip.

PROJECT URGED

WASHINGTON, June 7.—Immediate necessity of development of the Colorado river power, irrigation and flood control project at Boulder canyon, Colorado, in order that danger from flood may be averted in the Imperial valley and surrounding regions, was urged upon President Harding today by representatives of various city organizations of California.

DR. BROWN IS ELECTED TO HEAD CLUB

Business Women Overrule Her Protests by Unanimous Vote

HISTORIAN IS FOUND

Meeting Next Tuesday to Be Marked by Simple Supper at 6:15

Members of the Business and Professional Women's council met at club headquarters on South Brand boulevard for supper, followed by a business session at which Dr. Laura Brown was unanimously elected president to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mrs. George U. Moyse, who had been elected at the annual business meeting. Mrs. Moyse, though a most interested and active member, felt that her school duties the coming year would make it impossible for her to assume outside responsibilities.

Dr. Brown, who is a natural leader and one of the most capable members, has always been a favorite nominee, but has steadfastly refused to consider the office, feeling that she could serve as effectively as a committee chairman. This time her protests were absolutely overruled when a petition, signed by a large proportion of the club membership, asked her to take the office. Her acceptance left vacant the office of historian, which was filled by the election of Mrs. Grace Yarbrough to the post.

Reports of officers and committee chairmen were submitted, and plans for programs and entertainments were discussed.

The regular business session of the club will be held next Tuesday evening, and so popular are the supper gatherings that members will be invited to gather for a simple supper, to be served at 6:15, and followed by the business meeting, the only condition being that reservations shall be made with Dr. Brown or Miss Sayre, the recording secretary, not later than Monday afternoon.

ENFORCEMENT OF PLUMBING LAW

Contractors Warned of Danger of Violation of Regulations

A notice has been sent to all plumbing contractors by Superintendent of Buildings E. J. Spaulding, calling their attention to section five of the plumbing ordinance and notifying them that this section will be rigidly enforced in the future.

This section is as follows:

"Application for final inspection shall be made by the person, firm or corporation to whom the plumbing permit is issued, within ten days after completion of the work. Any person, firm or corporation failing to apply for final inspection within said period of ten days will be required to pay an additional fee of 50 cents for such inspection. No plumbing permit shall be issued to any person, firm or corporation from whom there is due any money under this section."

Non-compliance with this section of the ordinance has caused considerable annoyance and confusion for both the builder and the owner of various houses in Glendale. Several aggravated cases have occurred recently, with the result that the notices were mailed today.

ROTARIANS LIKE GLENDALE SAYS SANDERS

Monday's Visit Should Make Many Friends for the City

Monday was a big day for Glendale so far as advertising is concerned, according to Secretary E. F. Sanders of the chamber of commerce.

"I believe we got more real advertising out of Monday's motor trips to Glendale than we have from anything for months. Several hundred people were brought here, and there were a lot more who wanted to come, but we had no conveyances for them. It certainly was inspiring to see how anxious these people were to come to Glendale. Doubtless, many of them had heard of this city through their friends and literature sent out by the chamber of commerce and by other means. When these folks came to Glendale Monday, they were tickled to death, as they say, with our city. I heard all kinds of compliments for Glendale during the day, and I believe we will hear from a lot of these people later on. We cannot tell how far this advertising may go to the benefit of Glendale. All of these Rotarians are keen, wideawake business and professional men and they know a good thing when they see it. That's why they will eventually return to this city."

DRIVE FOR LEGION MEMBERSHIP TO BE STAGED

Opening June 23 Committees Will Try for 1000 Members

Beginning June 23 a city-wide drive for new members will be put on by the American Legion of Glendale. During this campaign a strenuous effort will be made to enroll every prospective member of the Legion into the organization. For this drive the city will be divided into 115 precincts. One member of the American Legion and one member of the auxiliary will be appointed to cover each precinct. Every prospective member living in every precinct will be called on and the committeeman will be required to enroll each prospective member or secure a good reason for that person not becoming a member. The big idea is to make Glendale 100 per cent, so far as the membership to the Legion is concerned.

A meeting to arrange the preparatory features of this campaign was held last night in the office of Attorney James F. McBride, president of the Glendale branch of the American Legion. At that session four city captains were appointed. Attorney McBride and Mrs. M. Frug were selected to take care of the northeast section of the city, James E. Whitmire and Mrs. E. U. Emery were chosen to take the southeastern section of Glendale, while Dr. Kammerling and Miss Jones will handle the northwestern section and Gordon Clayton and partner will take care of the southwestern territory. Each of these captains have been given the power to select his own committee. It is expected that everything in the way of arrangements will be completed in time for the drive to begin on scheduled time.

The drive will close on June 30, at which time a mammoth meeting will be held. For this event an elaborate program is now being prepared, J. W. Foley of Los Angeles, to be the principal speaker of the occasion.

DOMESTIC SCIENCE DEPARTMENT TO HONOR TRUSTEES

Miss Hanson's Students Prepare Annual Dinner for Board

The trustees of Glendale High will be guests this evening at the annual diner given in their honor by the department of domestic science, under the direction of Miss Ellen Hanson.

Those who have enjoyed such functions in the past and know what they mean, have been looking forward to this one for a long time. Ever since the date was set their mouths have been watering and they have enjoined their consorts to reserve the evening and allow nothing to interfere with this engagement.

From the viewpoint of the caterers it is an exciting event, especially to the nine advance students who have charge of the dinner, viz. Dorothy Scott, Doris Howe, Lucile Nelson, Doris Osmun, Jewel Cole, Frances Goldsborough, Dorothy Kendall, Ruth Hudson and Evelyn Hunt.

Covers are being laid for sixteen, Captain and Mrs. Thomas D. Watson, Dr. and Mrs. H. V. Brown, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Yarick, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Campbell, Mr. and Mrs. John Gardiner, Mr. and Mrs. George U. Moyse, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Ferguson, and Mr. and Mrs. Irving Oliver.

The table, of which a preview was permitted today, is a dream in its rainbow color scheme of pastal shades of green, yellow, lavender and pink, carried out in the dainty nut baskets, in the tulle knots on the crytal candle sticks, each on a doily edged with color, in the candles which will illuminate the board, in the flowers which will fill the basket with which the table will be centered and the boutonnieres which will accompany the dainty place cards.

A six-course dinner will be served, every item of which will have been made by the girls of the department, from the cocktail to the after-dinner mints, including the raised hot rolls.

The menu as outlined includes: Consomme and bread sticks; halibut turbans with becharel sauce, sliced tomatoes and bread and butter sandwiches; roast chicken, potatoes with parsley butter, creamed peas in timbales, orange ice, rolls, butter and jelly; Kentucky salad and wafers; red raspberry ice cream and cake; demitasse coffee, nuts and mints.

After such a meal most men would be speechless, but while no program has been arranged it is a reasonable certainty that the men on the board will overflow in outbursts of appreciation of the work of this department which appeals to the average man more than any other in the school, because, in his opinion, it represents femininity at its best.

SAWTELLE PARTY STRUCK BY CAR

A southbound Burbank car on the Pacific Electric line hit an automobile crossing the tracks at Central avenue yesterday, and injured E. J. Griffith and Mrs. L. Kendall, both of Sawtelle. Mrs. Kendall received a cut on the head and an injury to her hip. Griffith was cut by glass.

They were taken to the Glendale sanitarium and hospital, and given first aid. Griffith later returned to his home in Sawtelle. Mrs. Kendall was taken to the county hospital.

Acocrding to a report of the accident filed by Griffith at the police station, the collision occurred at 1 p. m. Griffith said that he was driving south on Central avenue and did not see the approaching Burbank car. The car crashed into the front of the machine, tearing the body from the chassis and damaging the chassis.

1500 SEE PAGEANT AT SCHOOL

Mother Goose Draws Big Audience to Spectacle of Child Fiction

MANY TURNED AWAY

Chorus of 225 Children Show Work of Careful Training

The Mother Goose musical pageant, staged on the grounds of Intermediate, Tuesday evening, attended by some 1500 children and parents and from which not less than 150 were turned away, again emphasized the great need for an adequate auditorium or an outside stadium for affairs of this sort which are of such tremendous interest to school patrons.

It was beautiful, entertaining, and altogether charming as a spectacle. At one side of the stage on sections of the school bleachers, was a chorus of 225 children selected from 800 who had been trained in the clever, tuneful songs. The chorus was necessarily reduced to the number mentioned because there were no seating accommodations for more. This chorus told in song the stories enacted on the stage by all the old, much-loved, Mother Goose characters, who were delightfully personated by boys and girls representing, as did the chorus, all the schools in the city.

It was under the direction of Miss Elsa Brennaman, supervisor of music in the city schools, and she was most efficiently aided by the directors of music in the several schools in the training of the children, in the manufacture of the wonderful costumes and in other ways for which she feels most grateful.

Such a performance reflects great credit on the Glendale school system, and demonstrates the effective co-operation that exists in the music department, the efficiency of the instructors and the talent of the children taking part.

Outstanding characters who were soloists, were "Mother Goose," Ernestine Kotheby; "The Knave of Hearts," Harry Leiser; "The Five Braggarts," Randolph Willis, Eugene Lindgren, Donald Murray, Willard Wippert, and Richard Buck; "Jack Spratt," Daniel Gribben; "Old King Cole," Shirley Preston; "The Queen of Hearts," Margery Phillips; "Captain Bing," Robert St. Clair.; "Man in the Moon," Preston Hanning.

Because of the density of the crowd which filled the aisles, the final parade had to be omitted.

PROBE GASOLINE PRICE ADVANCE

WASHINGTON, June 7.—Congress and the department of justice joined hands today to protect the 17,000,000 automobile owners of the United States against soaring gasoline prices.

While the department of justice launched its probe of recent increases in the price of gasoline, the senate manufacture's committee was being organized for an investigation of its own.

ROYAL ASSASSINATION

BELGRADE, June 7.—A plot to assassinate the royal families of Russia and Serbia, gathered here for the marriage of Princess Marie to King Alexander, is reported to have been discovered by secret police.

Extraordinary precautions to guard the royal personages' lives are being taken.

Temper Rent to the Unshaved Tenant Is Plan

SAN FRANCISCO, June 7.—Tempering the rent to fit the pocketbook of the tenant, was a new proposal placed before the state apartment house owners and managers' convention, which continued its sessions here today.

"We are a profession," E. N. Fritz, large apartment house owner of San Francisco, told the convention.

"When a doctor operates on a patient his fee is regulated by the external signs of opulence the patient shows. Such practice is not considered unethical. I see no reason why we cannot do the same thing with our better class of apartment houses."

So you better get out the old clothes and let the whiskers grow when you go apartment hunting. It may save you money.

CHICAGO, June 7.—Prohibition agents raided a "make your own" bar here today. Customers, on direction of the keeper, were instructed how to mix up their own whisky, gin and brandy.

NEW YORK, June 7.—West New York police precinct blotter looked like a page of history. Alexander Hamilton is in for violating city ordinance. George Washington booked for breaking a city law. Martha Washington in a cell charged with calling names to a neighbor.

BETTER STREETS FOR GLENDALE SAYS MAYOR

New Budget ta Reflect Move to Highway Repairs

"An extensive campaign for better streets in Glendale will be the big job for the coming fiscal year," Mayor Spencer Robinson, who has just returned from San Francisco, said this morning.

"The city must push the campaign for better streets as rapidly as possible. A city is judged by the streets and as Glendale is the fastest growing city in America, we must prove it by having good streets."

The budget in preparation for the coming year shows that a larger appropriation has been made for street work than for any other improvement.

"In my trip to and from San Francisco I based my judgment of the towns and cities I drove through, solely on the streets," said his honor. "If a town had smooth streets I left it with a favorable impression. The towns that had rough, ill-conditioned highways, I left with no desire to ever return.

"I am going to make a strong fight for better streets, not the cheapest. Oil tamped streets will not be used in the future as this material does not stand the wear and tear of traffic. All improvement in the future will be of the type that will stand heavy traffic.

"One of the things that impressed me with San Francisco was the distance one can ride for five cents on a trolley car. On one line I rode for seven miles and was given a transfer. How far I rode on the transfer I do not know. This should be the case in Los Angeles."

Mayor Robinson, City Manager W. H. Reeves and City Engineer C. L. Hill were in conference this morning. They were preparing plans for an extensive streets improvement campaign to be launched with the beginning of the fiscal year.

CONTRACTORS TO CONSIDER PLAN FOR LICENSE

Meeting Called for Tomorrow at City Hall to Discuss Question

A meeting of all building contractors of this city has been called for tomorrow night at the city hall by Building Superintendent E. J. Spaulding. It will be held in the council chamber at 7:30 p. m.

The purpose of the meeting is to discuss the proposition to charge all builders a license fee. This fee, if charged, would protect the Glendale contractors against builders from other cities. A fee of approximately $75 and a bond would be required of any outside contractor working in Glendale.

Several proposed changes in the building ordinance will also be discussed.

PARIS, June 7.—France grabbed her slipping resources today to battle for the 1924 Olympic games as the International Olympic committee went into session to decide the place for the next games.

ALIVE TO SERVICE

Adopts Constitutional Chances Recommended by Bottsford

Another bunch of yellow, blue and white boosters left Glendale this morning for the Rotary convention in Los Angeles, their hearts set on informing the members of the convention that Glendale is on the map.

The Rotarians feel that they have an excellent opportunity to advertise through this convention and they are expecting to take advantage of this to the fullest extent.

At the convention yesterday the new constitution and by-laws were adopted, this following an outline of the work of the constitutional committee by Samuel Botsford of Chicago. There are two vital points in the new constitution, these being the lifting of the ban which formerly made impossible the formation of more than one club in cities of a million or less population, and increasing the board of directors from five to nine.

Quite a number of prominent Rotarians were presented to the convention, these including Ralph Cummings, Lancaster, Pa., first vice president; William Coppock, Council Bluffs, Iowa, second vice president; Lutcher Clark, Orange, Texas, third vice president; Chas. Perry of Chicago, secretary; Rufus Chapin of Chicago, treasurer; Geo. W. Harris of Washington, D. C., sergeant-at-arms. The twenty-five district governors were then presented, as were the four past presi-

Other distinguished guests presented were Marcel Franck, representing France; W. C. Osborn, representing Australia; H. P. Coates, representing Montevidio; Vivian Carter of London; Alexander Wilkie of Edinborough, Scotland; Kenneth Simpson of Glasgow; Arthur Chadwick of London; K. M. Van Sant of Mexico City; Alfred Montgomery of Belfast, Ireland; D. C. Jones of Cardiff, Wales, and a number of others.

It was reported that there are 1214 Rotary clubs in existence in 24 countries, and others are being formed at a rate of 200 a year. There are now 80,000 business and professional men actively engaged in Rotary work.

Today's program opens with the brilliant spectacle of Rotary's history and future, which hundreds of delegates, who could not find seats in the convention hall, failed to see yesterday.

During morning and afternoon sessions today, leading Rotarians from all parts of the world will speak on the work, aims and accomplishments of their organization.

One feature of the day will be a series of short talks on "The Voice of Rotary Around the World" by delegates from all the foreign countries represented.

Choral singing by the convention under the direction of Frederick Carberry of Milwaukee and Charles Bulotti of San Francisco, which was one of the most effective features of the opening session, will be repeated throughout the convention.

Delegates, and particularly the foreign representatives, were immensely entertained yesterday by the California fiesta, reviving mining days, staged in Praeger park. The little band of Sacramento whiskerinos, survivors of the famous "Days of '49" celebration, furnished one of the main attractions of this production.

A new southwestern district, comprising the states of Arizona, New Mexico and the section of Texas surrounding El Paso, was formed yesterday, and possibly other districts will be suggested before the committee completes its work, it was stated.

BROOKHART'S LEAD IS INCREASING

DES MOINES, Ia., June 7.—Smith W. Brookhart's lead in the Iowa primary race rose steadily today as results from distant precincts were reported in.

With but 113 precincts of the 2348 in the state missing, the progressive candidate had polled 129,426 votes. Thorne had 50,696; Pickett, 49,889; Francis, 49,024; Sweet, 33,962; Stanley, 12,641.

ARMENIA HAS BOY SCOUTS

CONSTANTINOPLE (Special Correspondence). — When Chauncey T. Lamb, lumberman of Hinsdale, Ill., visited Constantinople recently on a Mediterranean cruise, he and other members of a tourist party were met by refugee boys organized as boy scouts.

As a result, the boys won a gift which provided tents for some of the 1500 Armenian orphans who have been formed into scout troops by relief workers.

The scouts, Lamb learned, serve as disciplinarians among the 10,000 children in Near East relief orphanages at Constantinople. Most of them are from destroyed villages and have been gathered in by relief workers, after prolonged wandering in the hills, living upon roots and stems of vegetation.

Orphanage directors said that American boy scout principles had taught service and that as a result, all of the laundry, cooking and cleaning required by scores of orphans, were voluntarily done by the scouts themselves.

If a man's bluff does not work he is liable to find himself in an awkward position.

TEACHERS' WAGES ARE INCREASED

Board of Education Considers Conditions and Defers Budget

The chief business transacted at the meeting of the board of education Tuesday night was the election of new teachers and readjustment of salaries to meet the changed conditions brought about by the enlargement of so many of the schools through additions in process of construction, which will increase the work and responsibilities of principals and teachers. The board voted an average raise in salaries of $5 per month. The consideration of a budget went over until the next meeting.

The board also voted to employ a business manager, though the appointment was not made, and Superintendent White was authorized to proceed to organize janitors and repair men for the summer work, pending the appointment.

A request from the Eagle Rock schools to cooperate with them in the employment of art, penmanship and music supervisors, was denied on the ground that the Glendale schools need the full time of their supervisors in these subjects.

A proposition from the Glendale city engineer, accompanied by explanatory maps, requested the board to consent to the cutting off of the corner at Columbus and Doran, to produce a curve and so remove the jog in Doran at that intersection. Superintendent White was instructed to get further information from the city with reference to the improvement of those streets and report, before any action should be taken.

Architect George Lindsay submitted reports concerning progress on certain school buildings in process of construction, stating that the Acacia avenue building will be completed in two weeks.

The new teachers elected are, for the most part, Glendale residents. They are: Miss Adelia Salstrom, who has been a teacher at Intermediate, to be assistant supervisor of physical training; Miss Helen Reynolds, 910 Kenneth road; Miss Mary E. Rich, 1022 Boynton street; Miss Zoe Thompson, 130 North Cedar street; Miss Annabelle McClellan, 126 North Central avenue; Miss Lilian Pumphrey, now of 2110½ Sixth avenue, Los Angeles, but formerly of Glendale and a graduate of Glendale high; and H. Edward Bremer, 1075 Browning boulevard, Los Angeles.

"Yes. I am afraid there'll be a death in our street shortly," replied Jim. "There was a rooster crowing in our yard before daylight, and it's a sign of death."

"Nonsense, man!" said his mate. "That's an old woman's tale!"

Next day the two men met again.

"Has there been a death yet, Jim?" asked the skeptical one.

"Yes," was the unexpected reply. "I killed that darned rooster, all right."

TO DISCUSS UNION PACIFIC PROPOSAL

Association to Meet at Harrower Laboratory Tomorrow

The East Glendale Advancement association will meet in the library of the Harrower laboratory at noon tomorrow to discuss the proposal recently submitted by the Union Pacific railroad to electrify its line in Glendale, along Glendale avenue.

The association will discuss methods of raising the $25,000 bonus asked by the railroad. The method that has already been suggested is to form an assessment district on the east side of the city.

The majority of the property owners on the east side favor this method. Many of them have already stated that they are willing to pay such assessment as the improvement would benefit the entire east side.

The best way to flee from the tempter is to fly to your brother's aid.

LAST FORUM OF TUESDAY CLUB

ing conditions, the Carnegie Institute investigators have recommended that competent married teachers be urged to continue in the work, and that, since 90 per cent of school attendance is to be found in the grammar schools, the very best teachers available be put into the lower grades and receive as much pay as high school teachers.

Mrs. Kemper Campbell, also of Glendale, was next introduced, and indorsed the points made by Mrs. Toll from her own experience as a teacher, telling her own reasons for leaving that work to study law, in her customary frank, charming way.

Woman's entrance into the profession has been too recent, she declared, to have produced any very great effect as yet, but women in law are learning the futility of laws which represent a commendable sentiment, but which are impracticable to enforce.

"I went into the legal profession," she said, because I got tired of the work I was doing in the school room and wanted to see if I could find more contact with life. I found it to the full."

Apart from the unmarried women or the women who will never marry, to whom the profession should be open if it attracts them, Mrs. Campbell expressed the opinion that the legal profession is as good a preparation for marriage as any profession of which she has knowledge. She backed up her argument by giving statistics of the happy marriages which had been made by the women members of her law class, most of whom are mothers and none of whom have had occasion to seek the divorce court. But, she declared, it will not do to make a lawyer of the inexperienced, unfledged high school girl, with none of her powers developed and no knowledge of life. Instead, she advocated independence in some other avocation until poise and experience have been acquired sufficient to command respect.

Though the has endeavored to drop her legal work, case after case has come to her as a broker or go-between, not to do the work herself, but to be responsible for it an dfor the selection of an honest and competent lawyer who will do it.

The third speaker of the day, Mrs. Pearl Rall of the Los Angeles Express, gave an excellent talk on women in newspaper work. She dwelt on its allurement as "the great advanture," which compensated in some measure for long hours, poor compensation and no vacations, since the insatiable presses are always shrieking for copy.

At the business session which preceded the program, Mrs. M. A. Williams, as chairman of ways and means, reported that but 33 per cent of the members to whom cards had been sent asking for pledges toward the new clubhouse, had responded. She reminded the club that this means of raising necessary funds had been adopted by vote of the club, in lieu of an entertainment, and asked members to return the cards, even though they were unable to respond, saying that the date for return would be extended for a month.

Announcement was made of the entertainment to raise $100 to place the name of Cora Taylor, founder of the club, on the memorial roll of the state federation, and a number of members in the audience took tickets.

The president, Mrs. Hutchinson, stated that bids for the clubhouse had been delayed, but would probably be received Wednesday night.

A communication from the Ebell club of San Fernando , enclosing a resolution protesting against changing the name "San Fernando valley" to "Los Angeles valley," was read, and, on motion of Mrs. John Robert White, the club voted its indorsement of the resolution, and instructed the secretary to communicate its action to the San Fernando club.

A most interesting letter from Mrs. H. R. Boyer, addressed to Mrs. Hutchinson, describing conditions in Austria, was read by the secretary, Mrs. John Dunn.

Mr. Myer, a representative of the beet sugar industry, made a five-minute talk, urging the women to buy beet sugar.

CHRISTIAN CHURCH MEMBERS VISIT MASSIE HOME

Forty Motor to Long Beach to See Old Folks and Hold Picnic

Yesterday afternoon about 40 members of the Christian church of this city motored to Long Beach and visited the Massie Home for old people. Mr. Massie, now of Los Angeles but formerly of Glendale, donated this home so that the old men and women who are unable to take care of themselves and have no other home, can be well taken care of. They have their own gardens, chickens and cows, and one has to be 70 years old before they can stay at this home, and most of the inmates are from 73 to 86 years of age. The Glendale people took large quantities of food for the home and a picnic dinner for themselves, which they spread out in the yard of the home.

This home is supported by the different churches, and Mr. and Mrs. Boyd are the caretakers and managers. After dinner, a very nice program was given, some of the members of the home giving short talks and singing old songs. Mrs. J. R. Dougherty of Glendale, gave a very interesting reading and Mrs. Andrews, an old member of the Christian church, gave two readings. Mr. Bacon of the Christian church of this city, gave a fine address, and the rest of the afternoon was spent in singing old songs and hymns. The Glendale people visit this home once a year and the members of the home always look forward to the good times they have from year to year.

THIN SKIRT IS NEW LEAGUE OBJECTIVE

Paris Young Women Rebel Against Long Skirt Dictum

PARIS, June 7.—"The Thin Skirt League" is the latest feminine organization to start Paris a-talking.

Its object is to safeguard the rights—and the lefts—of those young ladies who, possessed of shapely underpinning, find themselves hard hit by the edict decreeing that long skirts shall be in fashion this summer.

The members pledge themselves, while wearing skirts fashionably long, to make them of such thin stuff that even in the shade their well-modeled props will be quite apparent.

"We don't mind wearing fairly long skirts, because it is the fashion," declared one of the leaguers, a pretty brunette with blue eyes, "but we think our masculine admirers ought to be entitled to see more than our ankles, after having been used to observe the rest of our legs veiled only by silk stockings. If this part of our person, which is obviously attractive, remains hidden hereafter, many men won't be able to distinguish a natural advantage that has proved itself very important after the short skirt fashion was implanted."

"I joined the league," said another, a tall blonde mannequin, "because I don't like long skirts. They make me miss all the 'effects' I made when we were allowed to wear dresses down to the knees only. Now, to attract, really is very difficult. I hope next winter the skirts will be shorter, otherwise I'll quit being a mannequin and become a painter's or sculptor's model. Then I may wear skirts as short as I please, or not wear any at all."

"I am glad to be a leaguer," declared finally a small arpete of about eighteen, "because my legs are prettier than my arms—the latter are too thin."

The "league," which has already many members, has established its headquarters in a little tearoom near Paquin's, and its decisions promise to be most fully followed.

Truths in Epigram

His heart was as great as the world, but there was no room in it to hold the memory of a wrong.—Emerson (1803-1882).

Be noble! and the nobleness that lies in other men, sleeping but never dead, will rise in majesty to meet thine own.—Lowell (1819-1891).

RACIAL HOSTILITY

It is to be hoped that reports of trouble between white and black residents of Texas have been greatly exaggerated. The occasional outbreaks of mob law are sufficient to disgrace this country in the eyes of the world. Anything approaching a pitched battle would accentuate the disgrace. It would be misunderstood abroad, where there is not intimate knowledge of American georgraphy, no nice distinction is drawn between New England and any other section, and where, for all Europeans know, California and Texas may be neighboring counties. All of which is to say that if the conduct of Texas shall be such as to besmirch its reputation, the scar will mark the fair fame not of one state only, but of the United States.

The people of the South often affirm that they understand the negro. Then they take such a course as to prove that they do not understand the colored man at all. If they did understand him, and treated him as a responsible human being, the horrid stories of lynching and unspeakable torture would not be heard. The courts of Texas ought to be able to deal with criminals white or black, and perhaps as to the latter, they are able. They are not competent to deal with the black, for community sentiment will not permit. If the black offends, the community desires to deal with him direct. For the crimes by reason of which the mob hangs an offender, the courts would hang him promptly, but by due and decent procedure. Such treatment would not arouse the hatred of other blacks. On the contrary it would teach them to respect law.

In the absence of the racial hatred so carefully instilled and nurtured, largely through lynching outrages, there would be no need and no likelihood of battle between armed forces of blacks and whites.

THE WAR DEBTS

Hope that the financial status of Europe would be made more favorable soon has ebbed since the first announcement of the efforts that were being made to bring about financial adjustment. It is said now that the outcome depends upon the United States. It is deemed so able to carry a burden that it is to be asked to bear the burdens of Europe. This suggests a tendency to make this country the goat. The role is not desirable. It does not make strong appeal. To assume such role would be altruism of a type almost too fine for general acceptance.

As the matter stands at this writing, the bankers who have been formulating a plan propose that the reparation to be paid by Germany be cut some thirty-three billions. At the same time comes the announcement that the cut will not be made unless the United States shall annul the war debt. For the direct benefit of Germany, it is asked to make this sacrifice. In other words the allies, in seeming to forgive thirty-three billions of debt, collection of which otherwise would be a great problem, really are seeking to have the United States hand them a third of the amount.

Naturally some question arises both as to the wisdom and justice of this. It is interesting to speculate as to what extent the favor would be reciprocated. In restoring the monetary world to normal, advantages might be created in which the United States would share, and probably it would have to accept this in lieu of gratitude.

QUESTIONING CONAN DOYLE

Conan Doyle is having comparatively smooth sailing. He has met with uniform courtesy in this country. He draws large crowds that pay for the privilege of listening to him. Some of those present believe what he tells them. Others do not believe, but are polite in their dissent. Occasionally, however, somebody on the outside prepares a sort of questionaire. There is a thoughtful gentleman named Hogg, for instance, who wants to know.

Hogg fails to understand why, if spirits may come back to discourse of Aunt Martha's crazy quilt, or the death of Fido, the faithful family dog, or a juvenile fall out of an apple tree they may not say something worth while. He wants to know why, if they are using language to babble trivialities, they do not use the power thus indicated, to talk of something useful. This really is an interesting point. It seems reasonable that the immortal essence that survives beyond the grave, must include the intelligence and perception of the individual.

The suggestion of Mr. Hogg is that a few words from Abraham Lincoln concerning the four-power pact, would be appreciated. He believes a dissertation by Newton on the Einstein theory, would, if verified, have a distinct value. He would be glad to know Gladstone's opinion of the situation in Ireland. All this appears to be logical. There really is not much gained by listening to the "Indian control" talk base, or the infant control pipe in baby treble.

Of course these queries do not in the least shake the faith that is in Doyle, for that is unshakable, but they do have a tendency to excite the interest of those not yet under the spell.

GIVING STRAW BONDS

In every city there are bond brokers known by everybody concerned to be utterly untrustworthy. They are ready to go bail for any one able to pay for the service. The surety they give is of no value. The whole effect of their activity is to permit criminals to escape. Why they are permitted to operate is one of the mysteries to be explained only by their possession of a "pull." Chicago has been particularly hampered by these enemies of society and justice. Notorious men there, some who have served sentence, and others who wre loose pending decision of their appeals from sentence, recently were arrested for murder. They are at liberty now. At first the police proclaimed that no bail would be accepted. Bail was accepted after slight delay. Investigation is said to show that the men who signed the bonds, giving lists of property as the basis, do not have the amount of property they claimed. In other words, a bond morally worthless, is demonstrated to be actually worthless. If the prisoners disappear, as is confidently expected, nothing will be done about it. Not that much might not be done about it legally, but nothing ever is done. With the vanishing of the accused, and the proof that the bond is without value, the incident usually is to be regarded as closed.

For a time after the murders for which these men are not to be penalized, there was hope that the indignation of Chicago had been aroused to such point as would make reform obligatory and sweeping. It was a vain and fleeting hope. The bad men, the supposed assassins, walk the streets free, the malign power to do as they please is no whit lessened.

AN UNFORTUNATE OMISSION

Considerable ado is being made over the fact that in a recent picture designed to signalize, and doubtless to honor Memorial day, the Hearst papers slighted the veterans of the Civil War. Soldiers who had fallen in all of the other wars in which this country has participated were remembered. There was no portrayal of the fact that there had been a conflict in the sixties; no hint that the republic still paid tribute to the heroes who fell then, or those who survive still that desperate struggle.

It is not to be believed that a deliberate insult was intended. The artist made a mistake. His error was due perhaps to ignorance. The drawing must have undergone the scrutiny of a hurried editor. No paper would deliberately have affronted the veterans of the Civil War, and their countless friends. There could have been no object in doing so. Such a course could have excited nothing but reprobation, and any newspaper man must have been aware in advance of a fact so obvious.

This paper is not to be taken as defending any of the Hearst publications. It has censured them severely and often. It believes that their policies generally are bad, and that their influence is for evil. It does not regard them as sincere. It looks with suspicion upon much of the news they purvey and with acute distrust upon their editorial opinions. Therefore it has a right to express the theory that in this particular instance the papers in question were the victims of the stupidity and haste of subordinates.

Not very warm interest is excited by the report that Lenine has had a stroke. He has been reported to have had many things more instantly fatal.

Four Hundred Eighty Million Buyers

By. DR. FRANK CRANE

If the head of a business house found out that there were 480 million potential buyers somewhere, he would get busy at once to teach them.

DR. FRANK CRANE

The United States is more of a big business house than it is of a nation, in the old sense in which nation has been so often used. That is, our people are individually and collectively more interested in doing business than we are in promoting national glory. We are patriotic enough, but our patriotism is conceived in terms of general welfare rather than in terms of conquest or swashbuckling.

There has always been competition among western nations for the trade of China, but, all said and done, it has only nibbled a bit at the edge of the cake.

Great Britain and Germany have long sought for Chinese trade.

The Germans especially are making up just now the time they lost during the war; their goods are freely entering the treaty ports, and Chinese customers are being diligently cultivated. German houses are being flooded with orders, especially for dyes, machine tools, cheap tractors, textiles, and that sort of machinery which Germany is prepared to furnish.

Great Britain, being a sea-going nation, is also pushing its advantage in a lively way. Dr. Wellington Koo, who was present at the Washington conference, declares that conditions of international trade were formerly much simpler than they are now. "There was then relatively little competition, while practically every important nation has now entered the industrial market, and those who fully realize the altered conditions and are best prepared to adapt themselves to them prosper most."

He also states that in the old days it was sufficient to export in the confident belief that there was a large market ready to welcome foreign goods. The large market in China is still there, and with the spread of western ideas it is becoming larger, but in the face of keen competition it has to be studied, and the tastes of its buyers cultivated and appreciated if their purchasing powers are to yield any adequate advantage to those who have goods to sell.

The Chinese have always had a reputation for commercial honesty. They are good people with whom to do business. China has abundance of raw materials to export, and a market for manufactured goods which bids fair to increase with the rapid awakening of the country. China is more receptive than ever before to the ideas of modern science and education, and to the advantages of trade with the west.

It does not take a long look into the future and it does not require the son of a prophet to foresee that the time is not far distant when Pacific trade will surpass Atlantic trade. For the simple reason that the Orient wants what we have and has what we want, while Europe has what we have and wants what we want.

The greatest civilizer, the greatest educator, and the greatest power of progress is trade.

Those western merchants and adventurers who have in former time done business with China have not always been of the higher order, and if the Yankees want to live up to their reputation for shrewdness, they will put their best salesmen, their strongest capital, and their highest grade of business dealing to work at cultivating these 480 million potential buyers.

THE LISTENING POST

"Closing the books."
That is an accountant's expression.
Or a bookkeeper's.
Charging off and debiting and crediting and entering and striking a balance.

* * *

It serves a useful and necessary purpose.
To show the state of the business.
Whether we are going forward or going backward or profiting or losing.
Making an intelligent record of our business affairs.

* * *

So the accountant enters the various items.
Lists our assets and liabilities.
Sets down expenses.
Figures up receipts.
And finally closes the books to give us the state of the business.

* * *

All of us are accountants, in a sense.
The accountants of our daily transactions and deeds.
Daily we have items of living for entering on the books of account.
We have tasks done and smiles and tears and regrets and hopes and the like.

* * *

Somebody does us a service, perhaps.
It ought to go down on the books.
To the credit of friendship and friendly humanity.
Somebody does us an injury.
Intentional or unintentional.
And naturally we enter it on the books.

* * *

But there is every day a new day's affairs begun.

So we ought to close the books of life each evening.
Carry forward no sense of injury.
No useless and unavailing regrets.

* * *

For they only clog up and confuse the books of the new day.
A little bitterness yesterday, it may be.
Why set it down on the books of today?
Why not charge it off with the accounts we closed yesterday.

* * *

A bit of disappointment.
Let us set it down and close the books.
Let us not carry it over to the next day.
A misunderstanding, a harsh word, an unfriendly action.
No room for it on the books of today.
Let us charge it off with yesterday.

* * *

Close the books.
Carry nothing forward but the assets of life.
The smiles and hopes and cheer and determination to go forward.
Why carry forward things that fret and disturb and unsettle us?

* * *

Let us begin the day with a clean page.
Wipe out the disappointments.
Charge off the disappointments.
Forget the stings and little sorrows and frets.
And when some one comes with a painful or unhappy recollection, we may say:
"Oh, that was yesterday's transaction. And I closed the books last night. It was charged off."

SONGS OF THE POETS

From the Arabic—Percy Bysshe Shelley (1792-1822)

My faint spirit was sitting in the light
Of thy looks, my love;
It panted for thee like the hind at noon
For the brooks, my love.
Thy barb, whose hoofs outspeed the tempest's flight,
Bore thee far from me;
My heart, for my weak feet were weary soon,
Did companion thee.

Ah! fleeter far than fleetest storm or steed,
Or the death they bear,
The heart which thender thought clothes like a dove
With the wings of care;
In the battle, in the darkness, in the need,
Shall mine cling to thee,
Nor claim one smile for all the comfort, love,
It may bring to thee.

EASTERN POINT OF VIEW

ORATORY AND OFFICE

[Washington Star]

Many interesting stories about Mr. Beveridge's come-back are circulating. One is that he took Mr. Now by surprise, and had the foundations laid for a rattling primary campaign at least two years before the campaign opened.

It was done in this way, according to the story: Mr. Beveridge is very popular at home as a lecturer. He talks well on all subjects; and of late, in Indiana as elsewhere, there has been a good deal to talk about.

These talks, or lectures, as you please, served to bring their author again into close communion with the people. So that when his name was suggested for the senate again the recent pleasant impressions he had made at non-political meetings served him well, and won him many votes.

At Chicago in 1896 Mr. Bryan, in one sense, was a dark horse. But he had been heard of before, and for several years had been laying foundations which were now to serve him well. He had been traveling a wide circuit as a lecturer, and by his oratory had made many friends. So that when the Chicago convention rose to his speed there were [illegible]tes who with pleasant memories of [illegible]er as a lecturer were easily turned t[illegible] the man for the exising party emerge[illegible] lecturer thus had played into the h[illegible]e politician.

The orator, platform or [illegible]s still a power with us. The people [illegible] be entertained and instructed by a man of ready speech, who has a message and knows how to deliver it. They come under the spell he cast, and while under it are his to command.

STATESMEN AS BALL PUNCHERS

[Manchester Guardian]

Lloyd George is being credited with having introduced a new form of exercise for statesmen by his ball-punching interludes in the Genoa conference, but this is not quite true, for at least one cabinet minister of our own times had a similar way of keeping fit. In the person of John Burns, always a keen follower of boxing, who used to be photographed preparing for a bout with his young son. One is inclined to think that Palmerston must have done a certain amount of boxing, even if the punch-ball was not in use in his time, for he was a keen follower of the prize ring. Lord Halsbury also seems to have had some experience in boxing, judging by the effective way in which he used his fists during a famous encounter in court when there was a melee round a box of documents and the future lord chancellor was discerned in the thick of the fray. And Sir Charles Dilke, though fencing was his favorite exercise, could box as well. A busy politician needs some quick and fairly violent exercise, since he cannot give very much time to it in critical periods, and for this purpose the advantages of the "ball" are obvious. Also there is no form of exercise which gives such relief to excited feeling. There might even be balls provided in the house of commons, so that members generally could punch themselves into good temper before speaking in controversial debates.

BETWEEN OURSELVES

By DELLA E. STEWART

"Good morning!" We say it, but do we mean it? Haven't you ever heard it this way: "Good morning," (with a doleful accent). "It looks as if it would rain, doesn't it? Dear me! We do have so much cold, rainy weather this year. My rheumatism tells me every time we are going to have a storm, and I had a horrible time last night; ached all over and did not sleep.

"They say the Blank's shop is going to shut down before long; maybe you'll all be out of work in a little while, and then I don't know what we'll do. Ouch! My hip gave me such a twinge then! Rheumatism is such a painful trouble. No one gets half the sympathy they need. I don't know how I'm ever going to get through the work I've got to do today. Seems as if the work just piled up ahead of me in spite of all that I do—and goodness knows I drudge most of the time. Dear! How mussy these rooms are. I do wish I had a neat family. It's pick up and pick up from morning till night in this house, for no one ever thinks of putting away their own belongings. When you have driven me to the grave with your carelessness, maybe you'll realize half that I do. I hope so, anyway!"

By this time all the members of the family feel as if they ought to be in prison cells, and don't care much if they do get there. The wrong key note has been struck, and no one cares about being pleasant. What's the use? Snappy remarks fly, sarcasm reigns, unkindness flourishes. When at last all have departed for their work, the mother sinks down into a chair, tired out already with the nervous upset, and declares: Did ever another have such a quarrelsome family as I have? I wonder what makes them so?"

She needn't look far for the cause, if her eyes were just open, need she?

COMMENT ON DAY'S NEWS

By HENRY JAMES

There semes a tendency to instruct the press not to say anything concerning the alleged war contract frauds, or the attitude of the attorney general towards them. It hardly is necessary to say that the press will pay not the slightest attention to any attempt to stifle its avowal of opinion.

HENRY JAMES

The presumption of innocence always soothes and sustains the accused. They cannot be deemed guilty until by due process they have been proved guilty. If unjustly charged it would seem the most natural thing in the world for them to demand vindication. As they squirm and protest against being afforded the chance of vindication, such suspicion as already exists, is deepened. The presumption of innocence becomes more and more to appear as a fiction.

On the general allegation that there were war contract frauds of huge proportions, now would make denial. Millions of dollars belonging to the people of this country disappeared. They seem to have gone as a series of gifts to individuals and groups that had no claim to them, and never had given value received. as the basis of even a doubtful claim. The total seems to run into hundreds of millions, perhaps into billions.

All that the press demands in this connection is that the men who have the unearned money be obliged to return it to the people who own it. There certainly can be no offense in asking the officials to whom falls the duty of inquiry, to hurry in performance of the duty, or at least to manifest an interest in the subject.

It happens that Mary and the chap in question both have money. They are not accused of having brains. The money keeps them in the light of publicity. It would be proper to set them down as a pair of chumps and let it go at that.

WATCHING THE PARADE

By JOHN PILGRIM

The man in the next office says there is such a thing as carrying economy too far. He says that ecenomy is like any other habit. It must be held in check. Otherwise it becomes a vice.

"We had to watch every penny when we first got married," said he. "That is meant to be taken literally. Our domestic budget had been worked out with a pair of calipers. A dime could throw the whole hickey out of focus."

He and his wife used to set aside so much for rent and so much for food and so much for clothing and so much for savings. They paid no attention to amusement or keeping the merry old bean alive. He got his intellectual exercise trying to chisel an extra dollar out of the commercial world. She got hers in producing more and better stew for fifteen cents than had previously been served for a quarter. When they wanted to have a wild time they went for a walk.

"Of course we got ahead," said he in his reminiscent mood. "A pair of gray apes could get ahead that way. We worked long hours and spent nothing, and the only thing we thought of was more money. By and by we had all the money we needed. Then we had more than we needed. The first thing we knew we were really well fixed. Not rich, y'understand—we're not the sort of folks that get rich—but we had more than we can ever spend."

Then, it seems, the habit of economy demonstrated its impoverishing clamp upon them. They knew nothing of the progress of the world, outside of the latest inventions in money-getting and baking pots. They could not enjoy a theater.

"My wife won't go to a theater," says he. "She says that she'll be derned if she'll sit throughout an evening in one of her good dresses. Fact."

So they stay home, because his wife can navigate about home in a dress she bought about the first year of the great war and is therefore past its first youth. He cannot read because he never formed the habit. So he plays patience. They have a car because that seemed a necessary proof to the world that they are now on Easy street. But they rarely use the car. Gas and oil and tires cost too much.

"If I had it to do over again," says the man in the next office, "knowing what I do now, I would not save quite so hard. I'd save, of course. The man who never saves never gets ahead. But I'd not make economy a key that turned the door of life against me."

CHANGING VIEW OF THE CHURCH

Rev. Isaac Reviews Progressive Thought on Religious Institutions

"Our Changing Conception of the Church," was the timely theme of Rev. E. Morgan Isaac's discourse last Sunday morning, in the Congregational church. "In the past fifty years," he began, "no other institution has been criticized so much as the church. This is a fact, whether just or unjust. It has had a disastrous effect, shaking the faith of many persons. Criticism of the church was severe during the World war, yet science was not so criticized, nor were educational institutions, nor did the so-called "age of reason" stop the war.

"The church has been a great teacher of governments," he declared, enumerating the power and benefits of organization as manifested by the Red Cross, the Salvation Army, and other great associations. "Our universe is organized, in every detail. It is a fundamental thing, underneath all creation, even in every part of the human body. The church has taught this, through the power of the tongue. It has also taught the power of symbolism, by the flag, and its various rites. The sacrament of communion by its symbolism stands for fellowship, and for living in accordance with what one professes to believe, as Jesus did. He came into the world to tell what He believed and what He knew of the Father.

"The church has emphasized many things that the government in emphasizing does not realize was pointed out by the church. 'Safety First' was not taught by the church, but 'Service First.' The church never thinks in terms of merely making money, but of willingness to die for the right. The omnipotence of truth is going to be a hard thing to learn. Faith lifts the soul to the Infinite, regardless of how the truth is expressed. I believe the most vital thing in the church is Christian experience, yet many persons think conversion is the great thing. The man who believes he is a part of the breath of God, that God is ever near him, is the man who has Christian experience.

"Enthusiasm is important. Christ was so enthusiastic that He never thought of physical things, but of giving the world the truth. We have got to learn that humanity is of more importance than any theories of humanity. Learn to be receptive like a child, have no prejudices and keep an open countenance. The great need of this world is unity, not uniformity. 'Neither pray I for these alone,' said Jesus, 'but for them also which shall believe on me through their word. That they all may be one, as thou, Father, art in me, and I am in thee, that they also may be one in us.'"

MINISTER OPPOSES FILM CENSORSHIP IN EAGLE ROCK

Rev. Isaac Unites With Those Opposing Control of Show Business

The cramped quarters occupied as a city hall were jammed with citizens of Eagle Rock on Monday evening, the regular meeting night of the city trustees, most of the seats being given up to the women present. The occasion for so much public interest was the knowledge that the petition for the passage of an ordinance regulating moving picture shows in the city, which was submitted to the trustees two weeks ago, was to be discussed.

As is customary, the mayor gave the visitors an opportunity to express their wishes immediately after the minutes of the previous regular and special meetings had been read, and the proponents of the proposed ordinance, or at least some kind of a regulating ordinance were first given the floor. Among its advocates were Dr. W. O. Johnson, chairman of the committee made up of representatives of five organizations of the city, and Prof. John C. Shedd of Occidental college, who expressed the conviction that a board of review with power to act is a vital necessity as a protective measure to maintain the high character of the community. The preponderance of sentiment among those present was against them, as evidenced by the applause following the speakers who thought it premature to arrange to censor a company which was organized in line with the present national movement for the betterment of moving pictures.

Among the opponents of the stringent ordinance was Rev. E. Morgan Isaac, who represented the majority of his church people; Jas. Ferdon, who said he was a pioneer in Eagle Rock, though now living in Hollywood, and was still a large property owner here and intending to expend large sums in improvements during the coming year, but would not return to Eagle Rock to live nor make said improvements if such an ordinance were passed; J. B. Brown, who spoke on behalf of a majority of the real estate men, who desire to see the theatre completed and in use; Rommel and Son, contractors and owners of the building, and Major Gibbs and Mr. Barry of the United Theatres Co.

Mayor Osborne then called on R. L. McNitt, the newly appointed city attorney, for a report of his examination of the ordinance with regard to its legality. Mr. McNitt read a carefully considered report, section by section. He showed that it differs from the Pasadena ordinance in a number of respects, one of which is that the board of censors called for is composed of six members, only one of which, the chairman, is appointed by the city trustees, the five organizations presenting the ordinance being given the power each to select a member from its own body, while the three members of the censor board in Pasadena are all appointed by the city. It is a rule of law, universally followed, the attorney said, that to give such appointive power in public matters to any organization is establishing a bad precedent. Neither can the trustees give any organization the power to prohibit Sunday shows, as that is against the state law, and moving pictures could not be singled out from other entertainments for prohibition. The ordinance, he considered, was defective in some other respects. On motion of one of the trustees, the ordinance, as proposed, was unanimously rejected by the council.

Mr. Johnson and Prof. Shedd stated after this action was taken that the ordinance as drawn up was intended as a tentative one, to be changed as deemed best after careful consideration by the trustees. Mayor Osborne assured them that if the need should present itself, the council could and would at once pass an emergency ordinance controlling the situation.

EAGLE ROCK PERSONALS

Rev. B. B. Weatherall, Dr. H. B. Crawford and George Claussenius returned Saturday from an automobile trip to Big Bear lake.

Mr. and Mrs. K. W. Hunt and Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Roach left Eagle Rock about ten days ago on a motor trip to the northern part of the state, going by the Ridge route to Sacramento and beyond, then to San Francisco, where Mr. Hunt represented Eagle Rock in the National Realty association's convention, as a delegate from the local realty organization. They will return this week by the coast route.

Having recovered from a long and critical illness, Mrs. E. Thompson, mother of Mrs. Chas. B. Dirks, 118 Rowland avenue, has returned to her home in Chicago to spend the summer.

Miss Fanny Baily, asosciate matron of the local Eastern Star chapter, and residing on Grandview avenue, will start for her former home in Iowa about June 15, to spend the summer.

Mrs. H. Chivers is receiving a visit from her brother, J. J. Hawes, whose home is in Mexico City.

Mr. and Mrs. Cutting of Glendale are now occupying the house at 159 North Highland avenue which they purchased of Mrs. F. H. Lerchen a few weeks ago. Mrs. Lerchen and family have rented a house on West Broadway.

Rev. E. L. Knox, whose lectures on astronomy in the Central school auditorium were so much enjoyed a few months ago, has sold his new house at 163 North Highland avenue and he and his wife will remove to Long Beach.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Dunn of Los Angeles have rented the furnished bungalow of Mrs. M. M. Frazier, at 235 North Kenilworth avenue. Mrs. Frazier and her mother, Mrs. Martin, will live in one of the Garrett apartments, on South Satsuma avenue.

20TH CENTURY CLUB ACHIEVES ART SUCCESS

Mrs. Hume Is Presented With Floral Token of Appreciation

Never was a more successful function given by the Women's Twentieth Century club, or anywhere in Eagle Rock, than the concert of the music section of the club, assisted by the Los Angeles Trio, whose members are ranked as unexcelled players on the Pacific coast, last Friday night. The chorus had practiced faithfully for months, and had drilled with a perfection of detail for which their director, Mrs. Ward Dutcher Hume, is noted. In attack, precision of time, attention to nuances, and unfailing harmony, their performance was such as to cause their painstaking leader to express unbounded pride in them.

Seldom, if ever, has such violin and 'cello playing as that of Calmon Luboviski and Ilya Bronson been heard in Eagle Rock, and their accompanist, May McDonald Hope, is a finished artist in that line. The audience which filled the entire ground floor of the clubhouse, which can be thrown open, with the exception of the cloakrooms and kitchen, would not be denied encores after hearing these artists in their beautiful numbers, which were published a few days ago in the Press. A Steinway grand piano was used, by courtesy of the Geo. J. Birkel company. In compliment to her unremitting efforts for an artistic success, the club presented Mrs. Hume with an exquisite basket, also a bouquet of flowers.

LADIES' AID ELECTS ANNUAL OFFICERS

At the last meeting of the Ladies' Aid society of the Congregational church, the following officers for the coming year were elected: President, Mrs. C. M. Hensley; first vice president, Mrs. Shirley Allen; second vice president, Mrs. Alice Tinkham; corresponding secretary, Mrs. J. H. Moshier; treasurer, Mrs. K. M. Hunt. On Wednesday of this week there will be an all-day meeting at the church to work on articles for the bazaar to be given in the autumn and to tie quilts. The girls of the Sunday school will make baby clothes and dress dolls for the bazaar, and the boys will make dolls' beds and other articles.

JUNIOR MUSIC CLUB OPERETTA

"Miss Cherry Blossom" to Be Given by Young Folks

On Friday evening of this week, in the Women's clubhouse, the Junior Music club will give the operetta, "Miss Cherry Blossom," for which the members have been carefully trained. This is an earnest club of music students from twelve to eighteen years of age, the first junior club to be admitted to the California Federation of Music clubs, which has been honored by the visits and compliments of Chas. Wakefield Cadman, Carrie Jacobs Bond, Ella F. Duffield, and other composers of note. Their crowning work of the season should be well attended.

MRS. WEATHERALL HONORED BY GUILD

Last week, at a meeting of the Women's Guild of the Presbyterian church, the members honored Mrs. B. B. Weatherall, wife of the pastor, with a life membership in the foreign missionary society, and Mrs. Martin Post with a life membership in the home missionary society, as a reward for their zealous work. It was a complete surprise to both ladies.

A political vindication frequently means only that the people are fooled again.

PLENTY OF FISH IN SAN BERNARDINO

Emil F. Swanson, proprietor of the Eagle Rock Lumber yard, says there are plenty of trout in Deep creek and City creek, in the San Bernardino mountains. He knows, for last week he caught the limit permitted, in each creek. Accompanied by his wife and her aunt, from Paso Robles, Mrs. E. J. Nye, several days were spent at Fredalba Park, between Big and Little Bear lakes, as guests of Mr. and Mrs. O. G. Crawford of Colton.

EAGLE ROCK DADS TO BE HONORED

"Fathers' Night" will be celebrated by the Central Parent-Teacher association on Wednesday evening of this week. The newly elected officers will be installed, and there will be a program of music by the school orchestra, a number by Allen Spurr, a blind musician from Alhambra, and an interesting speaker. Refreshments will be served. Everybody welcome.

The Juvenile Music club celebrated its first birthday last Saturday afternoon with a program in the Women's clubhouse.

STORAGE BATTERIES

Action of Cell on Discharge—The action of the cell on discharge consists of a reversal of the process described yesterday, on the action of the cell upon charge. The acid which has been forced out of the plates into the electrolyte by the charging current again combines with the active material of the plates when the cell is connected on discharge to produce current. When the sulphuric acid in the electrolyte combines with lead of the active material a new compound, lead-sulphate, is formed at both plates. This lead sulphate is formed in the same way that copper suphate and iron sulphate are formed when the sulphuric acid is dropped upon the terminals and on iron parts respectively. In cases of this kind, it will be noted that the amount of sulphate is always out of proportion to the amount of metal eaten away. In the same manner, when the sulhpuric acid of the electrolyte combines with the lead in the plates to form lead-sulphate, the volume is such as to fill the pores of the active material completely when the cell is completely discharged. This makes it difficult for the charging current to reach all parts of the active material and accounts for the manufacturers' instructions never to discharge the battery below a certain point, and likewise for the rule not to allow the battery to stand without charging for more than a certain period of time, usually two weeks at the most. As the discharge progresses, the electrolyte becomes weaker by the amount of acid in the formation of lead-sulphate, which is a compound of the acid and lead. This lead sulphate continues to increase in bulk, filling the pores of the plates, and as these pores are stopped up by the sulphate, the free circulation of the acid is retarded.

Since the acid cannot reach the active material of the plates fast enough to maintain the normal action, the battery becomes less active, which is indicated by a rapid falling off of the voltage. Starting at slightly over 2 volts when fully charged, this voltage is maintained at normal discharge rates with but a slight drop until the lear sulphate begins to fill the plates. As this occurs the voltage gradually drops to 1.8 volts per cell and from that point on, if the battery is kept on discharge, the drop will be very rapid. A voltage of 1.7 volts per cell indicates practically complete discharge or that the plates are so filled with lead sulphate that the battery should be placed on charge immediately. During the normal discharge, the amount of acid used from the electrolyte will cause the specific gravity of the solution to drop 100 to 150 points, so that, if the hydrometer snowed a reading of 1.280 when fully charged, it will indicate about 1.130 to 1.180 when fully discharged. The electrolyte is very weak then, in fact, it is little more than pure water. Practically all of the available acid has been combined with the active material of the plates. While the acid and the lead combine with each other in definite proportions in producing the current on discharge, it is naturally not possible to provide them in such quantities that both are wholly exhausted when the cell is completely discharged. Toward the end of the discharge the electrolyte becomes so weak that it is no longer capable of producing a current at a rate sufficient for any practical purpose. For this reason, an amount of acid in excess of that actually used in the plates during the discharge is provided. This is likewise true of active material.

RADIO CREATES BIG DEMAND FOR METALS

CHICAGO.—W. L. Chandler, president of the National Association of Purchasing Agents, said recently that the metal trades have followed in the wake of the radio boom and show a great increase in orders during the past two months. A great demand has developed for strip and ribbon metals which are used extensively in the manufacture of radio equipment.

An Air Education

Great Northern Plans Radiophone Installation

Great Northern Plans Radiophone Installation

ST. PAUL, Minn.—The Great Northern railway plans to make installations of radio apparatus throughout the northwest this year. Climatic conditions in the northwest would be overcome with the successful development of radio service, Great Northern officials said. They propose aerial communication in emergencies such as the recent wrecking of pole lines by sleet and the snow, the radio to "leap the gap" on such occasions. Practical use of the radio by railroads now appears dependent upon the elimination of existing interference with aerial communication resulting from the rapidly increasing use of the new art of transmission, said J. C. Rankine, superintendent of telegraph of Great Northern.

STANDARDIZED RADIO APPARATUS

A reduction in the prices of various items used in radio sets has been effected by the standardization of radio apparatus by the Bureau of Engineering, of the Navy, in cooperation with manufacturers, it was learned at the Department today.

Receiving sets of medium range and those used on aircraft as well as amplifiers, are reduced approximately 60 per cent in price, which, it is pointed out, should be of interest to the general public, as this type of receiving set is used in receiving the free broadcasting of concerts and lectures from many parts of the country. Detectors used in such receiving sets are now reduced about 75 per cent in price.

Medium size transmitting sets, both of the arc and spark type, are reduced practically 30 per cent, and various types of insulators used in assembling a radio set are reduced about 20 per cent. Vacuum tubes for transmitting and receiving, the latest thing in radio to come into common use, are averaging 40 per cent less than they have been selling for.

All the above material is also greatly improved in efficiency, it was pointed out, the latest vacuum tubes, for example, having over 1,000 per cent longer life than the early tubes had.

PHUNNY STUFF

I've been a widow all my life;
That is, since I have been a wife,
Communing with myself, the time,
In solitary pantomime.
Golf claimed him most every day,
And, as he niblicked on his way,
I followed in his gallery,
Or, on the clubhouse porch, drank tea.
At night, bridge took him from my side;
I couldn't play it—though I tried;
But at home, with ill content,
The while he gambled with the rent.
He gave up both, said he: "I'm through,
I'll stay at home alone with you."
But radio's got him. Fickle men!
And I'm a widow once again.
—Judge.

The phrase "tuning in" has only one meaning to a young father and it is not connected with radio. Any father will tell you that the young ones are the greatest little tuning coils on the market and they usually commence on the "yellephone" just when dad feels anything but like walking the floor.—Wireless Age.

The radio messages some think are from Mars probably at that are as authentic, as someone recently remarked, as the messages Sir Arthur Conan Doyle gets from the dead and those former Secretary Tumulty gets from the living.—Wireless Age.

SIDELIGHTS

S. S. IOWA TESTS POSTPONED

The proposed gunnery tests of the Atlantic fleet, with the wireless controlled U. S. S. Iowa as the target, scheduled for May 1, has been postponed indefinitely in order to effect fuel economy.

FRENCH AMATEURS LEAD A TOUGH LIFE

If you think the government is imposing on you when it requires you to keep your wave lengths within 200 meters, you should move to France. In France no amateur is allowed to send at all and is not permitted to receive any of the government or commercial stations. In fact, if he should copy a government message found in his room he would have a lot of explaining to do and perhaps would be fined.

Airphone Lessons to School Kiddies

Airphone Lessons to School Kiddies

CINCINNATI, O.—One of the most novel suggestions for the use of radiophone is advanced by James G. Fisk, a member of the Cincinnati board of education.

Mr. Fisk says that he would substitute the radiophone for teachers. He also declares that he is in earnest about his plan and has requested details from an electrical engineer.

Fisk says further that under his plan each of the 45,000 school children in this city would be furnished with a receiving set and that the lessons would be broadcasted at certain hours of the day from a central station. The children, he said, would go to the school buildings but once a week for further instruction.

He declares the plan would entail a saving of hundreds of thousands a year to taxpayers.

Movie Producers Using Airphones

Players "on the Lot" Listen in on Set as Diversion Between Acts

HOLLYWOOD, CAL. — Motion picture producers have found a great practical use for the Radiophone.

The time is not far distant when the Airphone will be as important to the movie maker as the arc light or the camera.

Experiments already made by Marshall Neilan, the young producer who has introduced various innovations in the production of pictures, indicate that Radio will play a vital part in future picture making.

The first practical phase of the Radiophone employed by Mr. Neilan as directly affecting motion picture production was its use as a medium of keeping in constant touch with his companions on "location." Over six months ago Mr. Neilan experimented with the airphone in the direction of players on a distant "location" from his office at the studio.

This proved such a wonderful improvement over using telegrams and long distance telephone that it practically gave the producer twice the amount of time for business each day. In other words, he can attend to business matters at the studio and keep in touch with his players and assistant directors whether they are on an island in the Pacific or in the distant mountains surrounding Hollywood.

Thus each Neilan troupe, when it goes on location, carries with it a complete station and keeps in hourly touch with its chief at the studio. A producer who either personally directs or supervises the important situations in every production, can now, through the Radiophone practically direct his players from his office. The use of the Airphone in staging big battle scenes or mob scenes for the movies has also been found a big asset. Instead of communicating with assistant directors who have charge of movie armies at distant points, the director sits with his cameraman at the principal point of the scene's action and by means of the amplifier, is enabled to instruct every player direct at distant points.

Another practical use to which producers have put Radio at their studios is the employment of a receiving set as a means of diversion for the players who spend many hours "on the lot." In many productions the producer is working night and day. This means that the players have many hours of idle time on their hands around the studio when not actually appearing before the camera in certain scenes.

In the past the phonograph was used to entertain the players while not actually working on the "set." Mr. Neilan has installed a receiving set with a large amplifier on an adjoining stage where players congregate and receive news bulletins, music recitals and operas in their leisure moments. This keeps the morale of the players in good shape, especially when they spend from nine to fifteen hours at the studio without any other form of relaxation.

"Many practical uses will be found for the Radiophone in the movie world," said Mr. Neilan in discussing the matter recently. Already I have found this wonderful instrument, which has taken the country by storm, a method of saving time and expense in movie making. It will not be long before every studio will find the Airphone as important to its equipment as the arc light or the camera."

A young Australian reporter was left in charge of the news room one evening. Suddenly he was confronted with, to him, an inexplicable cable from England.

It ran: "Lincoln, 3.50 Dean Swift Obit Roseate Dawn," and was, in fact, the result of a race which had been run that day.

Knowing nothing about racing, and feeling bound to justify his existence, the inventive youth had the following inspired paragraph inserted in the paper next morning:

"We regret to announce the death at Lincoln at 3.50 yesterday afternoon of the Very Reverend Dean Swift, the author of the well-known hymn, "The Roseate Hues of Early Dawn."

OREGON TO STAGE COMMENCEMENT

CORVALLIS, Ore., June 6.—The Oregon Agricultural College student body and faculty will stage the college's fifty-third annual commencement program on the college campus, beginning tomorrow. Exercises will last three days. Old grads from all parts of Oregon, and others who have strayed farther afield are expected to drop in for the festivities.

Tonight the dramatic classes will give the annual play, without which no commencement is properly a commencement these days. "Pomander Walk" is the drama which will speed dull care away for the merry events which are to follow.

Saturday is both Alumni day and Senior Class day. A picnic and the annual faculty-alumni baseball game will be features of that afternoon, and Saturday night the college will strut at the Alumni ball.

Dr. William O. Shepard, bishop of the Methodist Episcopal church of Portland will deliver the baccalaureate sermon Sunday morning. Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, president of Stanford University, will deliver the commencement address Monday morning, June 5, when the diplomas will be distributed.

Great men make room for great men.

FRISK KEEPS HIS NOSE OUT OF TROUBLE

By JOHN BARTON

(Copyright, 1921, by Associated Newspapers)

Bobby Robin just loves spiders—when they're inside of him. He was ever so grateful to Frisk Squirrel for showing him the nice, fat, juicy one the fluff-tail found in the crack where his swimming-feather was hidden. But he was puzzled, too. "Why didn't you eat it yourself?" he wanted to know.

"It wath a howid, cross fing," Frisk explained. "I thought it would bite."

"Bite? O course it would," chirped the bird. "It doesn't like to be eaten. But you give it a good peck, or a slap with your paw, seeing your nose is too soft for proper pecking. Doesn't your mother teach you anything?"

For every robin baby knows, before it even leaves the nest, that spiders are as delicious as soft-shelled crabs taste to us. (What if they can hurt? So can Uncle Shelly-Shoulders, if ever he gets his claw on you or me). But the widow squirrel had made up her mind that just plain curiosity wolud teach Frisk more than all her telling. He was mostly too busy to listen if she did try.

"She doesn't know very much," said her disrespectful little son. "She'th des a futh-budget." (Fuss-budget was a lovely new word to him. He'd heard Daddy Green-crest say it to Tad Coon).

"I should think she wolud be," the bird chirped severely. "You're in trouble all the everlasting time. It isn't a bit smart, either. I should think you'd learned enough to keep your nose out of it from now on."

"P'raps I will, the next time." Frisk meant it, too. Being in trouble bothered him. And so he did. He didn't get his nose in it at all, he—

Well, first he fished his feather out of the crack, the very spotted tail-quill Bobby had given him. Wow, what a state it was in! It was all wound round with sticky spider silk. When Frisk tried to unwind it with his grabby little paws the silk stuck to them. And he was having a terrible time trying to get it off without licking—for fear he'd get his nose in it. He was too busy to notice his tail. It whisked slap into the middle of the big, round, sticky spider web. He was in trouble, sure enough, but tail first, this time.

"Wait, wait," gasped Bobby. He was laughing till his perch danced under him. For silk can't stick to his slippery beak. So he untangled the unlucky little squirrel, even preened his feather for him, and hung the whole spidery mess from a twig, out of the way of every one. "Now," said he, "what will you get into next?"

TRAIL TO MEXICO IS PROMOTED

M'ALESTER, Okla., June 6.—The "King of Trails" which now extends from Winnipeg, Canada, to Brownsville, Tex., a distance of 2600 miles, will soon be extended to the City of Mexico.

Announcement to this effect was made here by E. A. Pratt, general manager of the King of Trails Association.

The premier of Manitoba, Canada, and a party of other officials of the Canadian government will leave Winnipeg this month for an inspection of the trail all the way through to the City of Mexico, Pratt stated.

A diplomatic visit of the premier to President Obregon will be combined with inspection of the international highway, he declared.

The trail is being re-marked over its entire length.

ON PITCHER'S WILL DEPENDS PURCHASE

SAN FRANCISCO, June 7.—The San Francisco Seals will be out a pitcher if Douglas McWeeney refuses to report to the local club. When the Seal management made the deal with the Chicago White Sox for Willie Kamm, in which $100,000 cash was paid, it was expressly stipulated that the Seals would not guarantee that Kamm would report, and that Comiskey would not guarantee that the players which he turned over in the deal in addition to the cash, would report to the Seals.

If, therefore, McWeeney refuses to come to San Francisco, the Seals will be out that much. They are sure of their $100,000, but are taking chances on getting the two high-priced ball players involved in the deal.

HISTORIC TREE IS CUT DOWN

GOSHEN, N. Y., June 7.—To avoid accident, a huge tree in the churchyard here has been cut down and an historic landmark thereby removed. It was 200 years old and badly decayed. From its branches, in 1779, was hung Claudius Smith, a notorious outlaw, whose exploits struck terror into this section in Revolutionary war days. It was a cottonwood.

"Trusting to Luck"

In the 14th century, when superstition and a belief in witchcraft worked a big influence in the lives of people, various good luck charms were depended upon to bring happiness and success.

That old tradition has endured to the present day to some extent, and there are still many who are "trusting to luck" that they will "strike it rich" and in some way be provided for in old age.

But the wise ones are building on a more solid foundation than luck. They know that a Bank Book is more reliable than a horse shoe, and are saving a part of present income while their earning power is still unimpaired.

ECONOMIC SURVEY OF SO. CAL. BY EXPERTS

Optimism Rules, Says Research Department of First National Bank

That the general feeling in agriculture and livestock districts is today more optimistic than it has been for some time, in spite of the fact that, due to weather conditions, crops generally will be marketed from three to four weeks later, is shown by the June 1 report of the research department of the First National Bank of Los Angeles and the Los Angeles Trust and Savings Bank to the War Finance Corporation, covering banking, agricultural and livestock conditions in Southern California, Arizona and the San Joaquin Valley.

Valencias are moving to market in increasing quantities, with prices firm on small sizes and higher on fancy grades, some fancy grades having brought as high as $7.85 per box, f. o. b., California points, an increase of about 75 cents per box during the past few weeks. Orchard run fruit is selling at about the same price as previously reported.

It remains impossible to make any accurate estimate as to the probable navel crop this winter, because of the late bloom and its very spotted condition, even withing the same orchard.

The lemon market has improved during the past two weeks. The best grades are selling as high as $8.75 per box in eastern markets. Local quotations will average from $4.50 to $5 per box, with some of the inferior grades bringing slightly lower prices.

The carry-over of canned deciduous fruits has been reduced approximately 75,000 cases during the past two weeks; there now being 175,000 cases of last year's pack unsold, as compared with 250,000 cases two weeks ago and 270,000 cases a year ago. At the present rate of consumption, stocks will be exhausted several weeks before the new pack is started. Even now the yellow free peaches constitute the only canned fruit carry-over of any size in this territory.

Growing conditions during the past two weeks have been exceptionally favorable to deciduous fruits and satisfactory yields of apples, peaches, pears, prunes, grapes and raisins are now anticipated, although all of them will probably be several weeks late in reaching the market.

The apricots of this territory were not hurt nearly as much as was anticipated earlier in the season and will probably run from 60 to 70 per cent of normal. As there is a smaller carry-over of apricots than any other canned deciduous fruit of this district, prices for this fruit will be high this season, although improved condition of the growing fruit may cause a slight downward movement in the early season estimate of $60 per ton to growers.

Conforming earlier estimates in previous reports it is now reported that the damage to the walnut crop by frosts and low temperatures earlier in the season will probably be less than 5 per cent of normal. Indications are that this year's crop will run from 22,000 to 25,000 tons, as compared with 16,000 tons during 1921.

The condition of growing grains is steadily improving, the only danger at the present moment being high temperatures, which will have a tendency to unduly force the ripening of the grains which are now several weeks late, thereby reducing anticipated yields.

The barley harvest is now on in the Imperial and Palo Verde valleys. In the San Joaquin Valley much barley is being cut for hay, because of unfavorable growth.

There has been no important change in the alfalfa situation during th epast two weeks.

The cotton situation continues satisfactory and, in spite of some difficulties of cultivation in Arizona, indications are that practically all of the acreage planted will be harvested. Unless unusual conditions develop during the summer there will be from 150,000 to 175,000 bales of cotton produced in this territory in 1922.

Added impetus has been given to the cotton industry of the Pacific Southwest by the recent announcement that a new outlet for long staple cotton is being developed in Japan. If it proves successful, a ne wmarket for many thousands of bales of Pacific Southwest cotton will have been established.

The sugar beet crop promises to be materially short of normal this year, due largely to the disastrous experience of the beet growers last year when most of them sold their crop under cost of production. Most of the abandoned sugar beet acreage has, this year, been planted to lima beans.

The lima bean crop will probably be larger than at any time in the history of this territory. Prices for lima beans will tend to sag very materially.

Other beans are in a fairly good condition and a normal crop is anticipated.

The warm weather of the past two weeks has materially improved the condition of growing vegetables, which are moving to market in increasing quantities.

From the standpoint of livestock men this district is in better condition than almost any other portion of the far west. Shipments from Arizona have been slow. There will be approximately 100,000 head of feeder cattle available for delivery in Arizona on July 1. Such sales as have been made in Arizona run from $20 to $23 for yearling steers; $25 to $28 for two-year-olds and from $30 to $35 for three-year-olds. Arizona sheep producers are in better condition than they have been for some time and expect to realize fro m$7 to $8 per head for their fall lambs and at least 40 cents for their wool after shearing at the railroad.

The Los Angeles market is increasing its purchases of local grass fed cattle and decreasing its receipts of eastern fed cattle.

The average price of beef cattle on ranches in this district is today from 7 cents to 7½ cents for fat steers and from 5½ cents to 6 cents for fat cows. Quite a few purchases have been made by Los Angeles buyers in Tulare county at these prices during the past few weeks and a few sales at these figures have been reported in the district south of the Tehachapi.

The fat grass cattle will not be available in very large quantities for about three weeks.

Various estimates indicate that the market will probably remain fairly steady until fall and that no material drop in prices may be anticipated during the present season.

Banking conditions in this territory continue to improve. Interest rates have eased off about 1 per cent in most of the agricultural districts and borrowings from the Federal Reserve Bank are smaller for this season than any time during the past three or four years.

The credit situation is becoming materially easier in this district. Indications are that there will be satisfactory supplies of credit for all legitimate business throughout the remainder of the summer.

GOVEROR, BANKER FACE COURT IN BRIBERY CASE

Oklahoma Official Charged With Taking Hush Money

OKMULGEE, Okla., June 7.—Gov. J. B. A. Robertson was arraigned in the district court here Monday on a charge of accepting a bribe.

It is expected that his case will be called for trial immediately.

That change of venue will be sought by the governor is almost certain. It is also possible that the governor will seek to have the indictment against him quashed on the ground that the bill does not charge an offense committed in Okmulgee county.

The governor is under indictment with Fred Dennis, former bank commissioner for whom a nation-wide search has been in progress, the indictment charging that they accepted a $25,000 bribe from John Rebold, Okmulgee oil man.

Appearance of the governor and bankers also indicted in connection with the failure of the Okmulgee Bank of Commerce November 2, 1921, in court Monday marked the second period in the sensational case, probe of which by a grand jury for two months put Okmulgee in the spotlight.

Rebold, J. Ray Brown, former president of the defunct bank; John Cook, former president of the defunct Guaranty State bank, which failed in 1920, and several other bankers, were also arraigned Monday and their cases set.

All are expected to seek change of venue.

District Judge Mark Bozarth, who will hear the cases, recently overruled a motion by Rebold's attorneys to disqualify him in trying the cases.

Meanwhile a nation-wide search is being conducted for Dennis. He is reported to have been in New Orleans several weeks ago seeking passage to Honduras. Later he was reported as having gone to Georgia. He left this state February 9 and has not been located since.

Failure of the Bank of Commerce November 2, 1921, precipitated the probe that resulted in the indictments of the officials and bankers.

When depositors of the bank learned that the state guaranty fund was depleted and that they could not expect immediate payment for their losses from that source, they petitioned Superior Court Judge H. R. Christopher for a grand jury probe.

County Attorney James Hepburn presented the matter to the jury, which was ready to return indictments February 9, when Judge Christopher dismissed the jury on the grounds that it had been illegally impaneled.

Christopher's decision aroused a storm of opposition which caused him to leave the city and later to offer to retract his decision. Then he offered to resign, but Governor Robert

UNIVERSITY AID FOR RANGE LAND

California embraces about 100,000,000 acres of land, only about 5,000,000 of which is in farm crops. Some 20,000,000 acres are included in the National Forests; about 21,000,000 acres are deed grazing lands; and approximately 54,000,000,000 acres are deeded grazing range, free to all but belonging to no one.

For many years the State Experiment Station has conducted investigations with a view to bettering the yield and quality of its farm crops and improving the blood of livestock. A large proportion of these investigations have been proven highly valuable to the farmer.

It is the plan in the near future to start extensive experimental range revegetation work in various important grazing regions of the state. This pioneer work will, in the beginning, be confined chiefly to the foothill ranges, which are seriously depleted, due to the great demand for the forage which they produce.

The range work will be under the direction of the division of forestry of the University of California and will be handled in co-operation with certain other branches of the department of agriculture.

ANYTHING GOES

He was buried at last in a pauper's old clothes.
He was unwashed, unwholesome, unclean and unshaven.
And all of his virtues on this tablet graven.
He idled most all of the time—he was glad to,
And never once worked unless he really had to,
The way of the waster and idler he chose,
And that was the matter with Anything Goes.

He lived in a house full of litter and dirt,
And a window pane broken and stuffed with a shirt,
He ate when he could, when he couldn't he fasted,
It's really quite wonderful how long he lasted.
No job he began and remained till it ended,
No thing that was broken of his that he mended,
He was out at the elbow, the crown and the toes,
And his motto through life was just "anything goes."

In the pulses of him no ambition once tingled,
His doors were unhinged and his roof was unshingled,
His wife was unfed and his children neglected,
And a really square meal something quite unexpected.
He believed in free spirit, free love and free thinking,
And everything free, with a lot of free drinking,
Till his life with free living was brought to a close,
Now what fine example was Anything Goes!

The Conflict Theory

By H. ADDINGTON BRUCE

Author of "The Riddle of Personality," "Self-Development," Etc.

(Copyright, 1922, by The Associated Newspapers.)

Answering a query as to what is meant by the conflict theory of the functional nervous and mental disease, I would begin by saying that in many, many cases it is much more than a theory, is indeed essential to an understanding of the disease and to the achieving of a cure.

Not a few authorities go so far as to take the view that every victim of a functional nervous or mental disorder is suffering from the effects of some profound inner mental conflict. Thus we find the Boston medical psychologist, Dr. L. E. Emerson, declaring in his excellent little handbook on "Nervousness":

"Whatever may be the ultimate explanation, the immediate reason for the disorganization of personality which constituets functional nervous diseases is the conflict which may obtain between the social consciousness of an individual and his narrower, less conscious, but deeper, more instinctive, and more violent wishes and desires."

This brief passage itself compactly sums up the conflict theory. But detailing it a little more concretely, I would say that whenever a situation develops prompting a person to a course of action which he feels to be wrong—or at all events contrary to the dictates and requirements of organized society—the resultant emotional struggle may have as a consequence a nervous or mental breakdown.

Which was conspicuously what happened to thousands upon thousands of soldiers in the world war.

Clearly, perhaps vividly, visualizing the horrors of the front, the instinct of self-preservation made them fervently long to be out of the war. Against escape by flight or desertion, however, was the urge of the race-preserving instinct, reinforced by considerations of honor, patriotism, etc. Thereby was precipitated within the soldiers themselves a conflict as bitter as the war against the Huns.

Again and again, as the army medical records show, the outcome was a nervous breakdown, a "shell shock." The self-preserving instinct, too insistent to be completely denied, gained its end by this means, albeit at the cost of its possessor's health.

In civil life a similar mechanism is frequently found at work to produce breakdowns.

A woman, for example, loses her love for her husband. Whatever the ties of affection between them once were, they do not now live in harmony. They quarrel incessantly.

With all her heart, the unhappy wife longs for her freedom, and perhaps meditates suing for divorce. But thoughts of her children, possibly the teachings of her religion, restrain her. A serious inner mental conflict follows. It may end in any one of various ways—and one of these is in a more or less serious nervous invalidism.

Whether nervous invalidism will be the outcome—as whether shell shock will be the outcome of a soldier's inner conflict—depends on several things. Most of all, however, it seems to depend on the struggling one's emotional control and poise. And this, I need hardly add, is chiefly a product of the training received in early life.

'RUTH IS RUTHLESS SPENDER,' SAYS HE

Does It to eKep Busy; He Is So Very Nervous

SAN FRANCISCO, June 7.—Babe Ruth is just a great big boy, according to Wellington Cross, vaudeville comedian, now playing the Orpheum circuit on the coast. Cross was Babe Ruth's teammate during the Bam's vaudeville tour last winter.

"Babe is the most nervous man I have ever seen," declares Cross. "He has to be doing something all the time. He can't stand still a minute. That's the reason he goes through so many fortunes. Money doesn't mean any more to him than it does to a young high school fellow. I know of cities where Babe bought boxes and boxes of cigars and when we left, he left them all behind him. He just bought those cigars to be doing something. Ruth was getting about $2250 a week for his vaudeville stunt, and he must have spent it nearly all every week.

"Babe is soft pickings. The boys 'take' him. He knows he's being taken, but he keeps right on playing. He's an incessant poker player, and likes it best of anything next to baseball. But he's no home-run hitter in poker—as you might imagine, being so easy going.

"Babe's toughest job in vaudeville is learning his lines. He certainly does hate the work of memorizing them, and when he rehearses he just mumbles through them. But when he gets on the stage he puts them over with snap. However, although he threw dirt at the umpire and got temperamental when the crowd turned against him, he never seemed to care whether he got a hand in the theater or not. It was all the same to him. I never saw him out of sorts or temperamental.

"Ruth's outstanding feature is his promptness. No matter when our act was to go on, Babe was always there on the dot, and this made a big hit with the managers, for in the past they've found that these high-priced stars are somewhat careless about showing up on time.

"It makes Babe very nervous to have an appointment, and have to wait. The longer he has to cool heels, the more nervous he gets. When we were in Washington Manager Rawbins of the Wieth theater fixed up an appointment for Babe and several of us to meet President Harding. When Rawbins told Babe, the latter said:

"'Well, now, listen. Don't make that date before Saturday, because I've got a lot of things to attend to.'

"It happened that Saturday morning was the only time President Harding could see Ruth. When we went to the White House Babe began to get nervous, and it began to get more and more on his nerves when we had to wait about ten minutes in the anteroom. Babe was frankly disgusted. And as a matter of fact when we finally saw Harding, Babe was so nervous that he wasn't as cordial as anyone would have thought he would be.

"'I'm glad to meet you, Babe,' the President said, 'Judge Landis gave you quite a suspension. It's too bad.'

"'Aw, I don't care,' replied Babe, 'What's the diff?' You see, the President had rather hit a sore spot. But the President wasn't overly impressed with the conversation, as might have been expected.

"Ruth is just a big, overgrown boy. I used to sit and laugh for hours at some of the stunts he'd pull. Babe's a poser, but unconsciously. He has plenty of ego, but he doesn't put it on purposely. It's just natural with him, and isn't offensive in any way."

New Patriotic Organization Is Initiated in Glendale by Young Folks

The organization meeting of the Grandchildren of the Civil war will be held Wednesday night, June 14, at the home of Miss Ruth Ryan, 332 West Acacia avenue, Glendale.

This meeting is open to children, grandchildren and great grandchildren of Civil war veterans from either side of the conflict. The purpose of the organization is to make better acquainted the children and grandchildren of veterans of both the North and Soutn, to promote an interest in what has been accomplished during both the Civil war and the late World war.

Both young men and women between the ages of 16 and 30 who are eligible, are cordially invited to attend and help organize this society, and become charter members. After the business or organization is taken care of, music and dancing will be enjoyed.

LEASE HOGS TO BE ELIMINATED

SAN FRANCISCO, June 7.—An attempt to protect their interests by the election to the legislature next fall of not less than six "not unfriendly" assemblymen, is the plan of the apartment house managers and owners of California, holding their third annual convention here today. A legislative committee has been appointed and several bills have been suggested or are already being framed.

Other topics for discussion by the delegate from all parts of the state are the relation of the landlord and the tenant, and the elimination of the lease speculator, who is blamed for the unsettling of property values and many other objectionable things heretofore blamed on the owners and managers. The association has declared war on the lease speculator and part of the proposed legislation is intended to curb his activities.

JOHNSTON PLANS RAID ON NETS

SAN FRANCISCO, June 7.—William Johnston, former national singles tennis champion, will leave San Francisco for the East in July to engage in the nation's biggest grass court matches.

Johnston will attempt to regain his national championship in the singles, and will also try to help the United States retain the Davis cup, won last year.

Tennis dopesters believe that Johnston has an excellent chance of regaining the title from William T. Tilden 3d, the present holder.

Johnston's trouble in the past has been his inability to stand the pace for five sets. However, he stood the gaff in great shape at Sacramento, during stifling heat, which makes his admirers hopeful that the heat will not bother him in the East this year, as it did last year.
